Quick Facts

- Interdisciplinary by design, Curry has academic degree partnerships with six UVA schools; its degree partnership with Darden is among the most innovative nationally and the Batten-Curry partnership in education policy attracts the very best graduate students in the country.
- Curry faculty have planned major cross-disciplinary initiatives aimed at transforming education and human development systems. These include the infusion of simulation into professional preparation in education and human services, the reinvention of American middle schools based on the recent science of positive youth development, investigating policies related to race and public education in the South, and the role of movement in human health and well-being.
