Vice President's Remarks

Colette Sheehy said the renovation of Garrett Hall has begun. They anticipate coming in at about 20% below the budget.

The South Lawn is coming along and partially complete. Some limited classes will be held there this spring, but the terrace will not be finished until July. The two academic buildings are a year ahead of the completion schedule.

The Rehearsal Hall site work will begin within a month.

The Dining Commons at the College at Wise will be completed this month.

Mr. Payne remarked that the South Lawn project has been quite complex and he commended Ms. Sheehy and Mr. Neuman for their work on the project.

Report by the Architect for the University

David Neuman explained the schematic design for the Barry and Bill Battle Building at the Children's Hospital, which is being constructed by the UVA Foundation for the University. They are targeting LEED gold certification. He said the Medical Center Operating Board reviewed the schematic design the day before. Approval is not needed.

Mr. Neuman also mentioned post occupancy evaluations for Fayerweather Hall and Cocke Hall. Twelve months or more after completing a building, they go back and interview the occupants about their satisfaction. They use "Survey Monkey", tours, and focus groups. The information is used to improve future projects and to correct some issues in the building. Fayerweather and Cocke have been very well received with a few comments. This information is also used for LEED certification.

Mr. Neuman commented on the work of the President's Committee on Sustainability initiatives to reduce the University's environmental footprint. He reviewed plans to comply with the Governor's Executive Order 059 which requires a 20% reduction in 2008 levels by 2025. The report on the work of the Committee is on its website. Mr. Wynne said a financial analysis should be conducted to determine where the resources will be found to accomplish this goal.

The chair asked Mr. Neuman to review the current Pavilion renewal and restoration projects. Mr. Neuman said the first priority is not to harm the structures—to be sure we are improving and not harming. He said they have used many of the University's trades people to do the work, which gives our employees the opportunity to learn and practice restoring historic structures.

Pavilion I is a fairly minor renewal rather than restoration. Pavilion II is more extensive, with cleaning and restoration of the marble capitals, and systems upgrades as well as interior work.

Pavilion X exterior restoration includes extensive changes to the façade, returning it to the original Jeffersonian design. The most dramatic changes are restoring the original parapet and returning to the original color palate of taupe with verdigris shutters. Many other more subtle changes have been made to the exterior.

The Committee was invited to take a tour of the exterior renovations of the three Pavilions following the meeting.
