AN INTRODUCTION TO INTERNATIONAL LEGAL RESEARCH

Introduction

Abbott's Law Dictionary (1879) defines international law as the law of nations; that system of rules recognized by common consent among civilized peoples, by which subjects of common concern, such as the effect to be given by one to the laws of another; the conflict of laws of different sovereignties; the rights of commerce upon the high seas; the rights of emigration, asylum, and the return of fugitives; the conservation of peace; the obligation of neutrality; the conduct of war; and the effect of captures and conquests. – are adjudicated.

The purpose of this guide is to acquaint the researcher with the sources of international law and the basic tools available to find them. It is not a comprehensive guide to all international law research, but to those sources available to the Office of the Legal Adviser.

A good overview of international law can be found at www.law.gwu.edu/burns/guides/intl.pdf

Guides to International Law Research

The following sources provide introductory information and instruction in international legal research. Several of the titles below also provide assistance with specialized areas of international law research.

A Bibliography on Foreign and Comparative Law. Charles Szladits. Dobbs Ferry, N.Y.: Oceana, 1955+ (1984+ prepared by Vratislav Pechota).

An index to English language literature on foreign and comparative law. Private and public international law works are also represented. Coverage begins in 1790. Good coverage of non Anglo-American legal systems in the books and articles indexed. Entries are arranged according to detailed subject classification. A detailed table of contents, geographic index and author index provides access.

K 38 B53

Germain's Transnational Law Research: A Guide for Attorneys

(looseleaf). Ardsley-on-Hudson, N.Y.: Transnational Juris, 1991+.

This is a practical guide to approaching and using foreign and international law research materials. The major focus is on Europe, but many public international law sources are examined. The chapters are as follows: (I) Foreign and International Law: Procedural and Practical Issues; (II) Foreign and International Law: Substantive Issues; (III) Foreign and International Law Research Sources; (IV) Subjects (Air Law, Space Law, Antarctica, Antitrust Law, Arbitration, Banking, Bankruptcy, Biotechnology, Business Organizations, Commercial Law, Computers, Council of Europe, Criminal Law, Cultural Property, EEC, Environmental Law, (and others in preparation); and Countries (in preparation). Appendices include a list of publishers and of EC depository libraries in the U.S. An index and detailed table of contents provide access to the entire work.

K 85 G47 1991

Guide to International Legal Research, 5th ed. Charlottesville, VA.: LexisNexis, 2003.

Produced by the staff of the George Washington University Journal of International Law and Economics, this is an excellent comprehensive guide to international legal research. Of particular interest is the section of Internet resources for international and foreign legal resources.

KZ 1234 .G85 2003

International Legal Research Perspectives. Adolf Sprudz. Buffalo: Hein, 1988.

This collection reproduces several of Adolf Sprudz' writings on international legal research. Among the articles included are "Basic U. S. Sources for Current Research in International Law: An Elementary Vade-Mecum" (5 IJLL 347 (1977)); "Status of Multilateral Treaties -Researcher's Mystery, Mess, or Muddle?" (66 AJIL 365 (1972)); "Problems with Sources of Information in International Law and Relations: The Case of the World-Wide Treaty Jungle" (9 IJLL 195 (1981)); "Fundamentals of Foreign Treaty Research" (76 LLJ 458 (1983)); and "International Legal Research: An Infinite Paper Chase" (16 Vand.J.Trans.L. 521 (1983)).

K 85 .S68 1988

Practice and Methods of International Law. Shabtai Rosenne. New York: Oceana, 1984.

Many methodological, documentation and bibliographical problems encountered in researching public international law are addressed in this work. Chapters include: Some Fundamentals; Treaties: Conventional International Law; Customary International Law; Judicial Decisions; Resolutions of International Organizations; and Teaching of Publicists.

Senate Treaty Documents/Senate Executive Documents/Senate

Executive Reports:

- Senate Treaty Documents were called Senate Executive Documents before 1981. They contain the texts of treaties as submitted to the Senate for its advise and consent, along with accompanying messages from the President and the Secretary of State. Senate Treaty Documents are numbered sequentially within each Congress (e.g., Treaty Doc. 99-1). (Library does not have them in a print format).
- Senate Executive Documents were originally lettered sequentially within each session of Congress (e.g., Exec. Doc. A). Beginning in 1981, Senate Executive Documents were replaced by Senate Treaty Documents. (Library does not have them in a print format).
- Senate Executive Reports, issued by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee after its consideration of individual treaties, they contain the committee's analysis and recommendations regarding approval by the whole Senate. Once a treaty is submitted to the Senate, it retains its treaty number (e.g. Treaty Doc. 99-1), through subsequent Congresses, until it is ratified, defeated, or withdrawn. (Library does not have them in a print format).

United States Statutes at Large, Washington: U.S. G.P.O.

The texts of all U.S. treaties before 1950 appeared in Statutes at Large. This statutory compilation served as the predecessor to UST. Volume 8 of Statutes at Large includes the texts of all U.S. treaties from 1776-1845.

KF 50 .U52

Treaties and Other International Agreements of the United States of America, 1776-1949 (Commonly known as Bevans), Washington: Dept. of State, 1968-1976.

This is an unofficial source for the text of all treaties appearing in Statutes at Large and other series. Volumes 1-4 are multilateral agreements arranged chronologically by signature date while volumes 5-12 are bilateral agreements arranged by country.

3. Indexes to U.S. Treaties

Treaties in Force : a List of Treaties and Other International Agreements of the United States in Force on (TIF), Washington: U.S. G.P.O. Annual.

Treaties in Force (TIF) indexes only U.S. treaties in force as of January 1 of each year. Treaties are arranged by broad topics and by country. Entries provides citations to the UST or TIAS. series as appropriate. To identify new treaties that the U.S. has become a party to since January 1, or to determine if any new parties have acceded to a particular multilateral agreement, it is necessary to consult other more current sources.

JX 236.5 .U58

United States Statutes at Large, Washington : U.S. G.P.O...
Volume 64 at page 1107 indexes all U.S. treaties published in Statutes at Large for the period 1776 - 1949 by country.

II. INTERNATIONAL CUSTOMARY LAW

1. Introduction

Customary international law is particularly important as a source of international law in absence of a treaty or other controlling rule. J. L. Brierly, in The Law of Nations: an Introduction to the International Law of Peace states that in order to determine what international customary law is on a particular subject "we must look at what states do in their relations with one another and attempt to understand why they do it, and in particular whether they recognize an obligation to adopt a certain course, or, in the words of Article 38, we must examine whether the alleged custom shows 'a general practice accepted as law.'"

Ian Brownlie, in Principles of Public International Law lists the following sources of custom as "diplomatic correspondence, policy statements, press releases, the opinions of official legal advisers, official manuals on legal questions, e.g. manuals of military law, executive decisions and practices, orders to naval forces etc., comments by governments on drafts produced by the international Law Commission, state legislation, international and national judicial decisions, recitals in treaties in the same form, the practice of international organs, and resolutions relating to legal questions in the United Nations General Assembly."

2. Sources for U.S. Practice in International Law

The following digests collect sources such as diplomatic correspondence, court opinions on international law issues, statutes and regulations, treaties, and other documentary materials in a subject arrangement in order to illustrate U.S. practice in particular areas of international law. Generally, these digests provide historical coverage, but the State Department has just resumed publication of a contemporary digest of U.S. practice.

a. Digests of Practice

Cumulative Digest of United States Practice in International Law, 1981-1988. Marian Nash (Leich) ed. Washington, DC: Office of the Legal Adviser, Dept. of State, 1993-1995. 3vs.
This three-volume set is a continuation of former Digest of International Law series produced by the Office of the Legal Adviser.
JX 21 .R68

Digest of International Law. Green Haywood Hackworth, ed. Washington, DC. U.S. Government Printing Office, 1940-1944. 8vs.
This set continues the Digest of International Law by Moore.
JX 21 .H3

A Digest of International Law as Embodied in Diplomatic Discussions, Treaties and Other International Agreements, International Awards, the Decisions of Municipal Courts, and the Writings of Jurists,... John Bassett Moore ed. Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1906. 8vs.
This is an extension of the Digest of International Law edited by Wharton. It includes a list of authorities, and index. Topics include: States: Their Characteristics and Classification; States: Their Recognition and Continuity; Sovereignty: Its Acquisition and Loss; National Jurisdiction: Territorial Limits; National Jurisdiction: Its Legal Effects; Exemptions from Territorial Jurisdiction; The High Seas; Interoceanic Communications; Nationality, Domicile, Passports, Aliens, and Extradition; Intercourse of States, Consuls, Treaties, Conventional and Diplomatic Relations; Intervention; The Monroe Doctrine; Claims, Modes of Redress; War, Maritime War, Prize Courts and Procedure, Contraband, Blockade, and Neutrality.
JX 21 .M7

Digest of International Law. Marjorie M. Whiteman, ed. Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1963-1973. 15vs.
This is the successor digest to Hackworth's Digest of International Law. Volume 15 contains the index.
JX 21 .W55

A Digest of the International Law of the United States Taken From Documents Issued by Presidents and Secretaries of State... 1st and 2nd eds. Francis Wharton, ed. Washington, DC: U.S. Government Printing Office, 1886, 1887. 3vs.
Under the general topics the material is arranged by messages of Presidents and documents emanating from the Secretaries of State in chronological order, opinions of Federal courts, and opinions of the Attorneys-General.
JX 21 .W52

Digest of the Opinions of the Attorneys General of the United States, with References to Leading Decisions of the Supreme Court. Christopher Columbus Andrews ed. Washington, DC: A.O.P. Nicholson, 1857.
It includes decisions of the Attorneys General from the beginning of the Federal government to 1856. While limited in scope it does serve a useful purpose. It is the only Digest covering the construction of treaties and the political relationship between the U.S. and foreign nations prior to the Digest of the Law of the United States.... Topics of interest are aliens, claims, foreign courts, extradition, foreigner, law of nations, State Department and treaties.

KF 5406 .A65 A6 1857

Digest of the Published Opinions of the Attorneys-General, and of the Leading Decisions of the Federal Courts, with Reference to International Law, Treaties, and Kindred Subjects., Rev. ed., Cadwalader, J.L. comp., Buffalo, N.Y.: W.S. Hein, 1998.
Cadwalader's work was the first subject compilation of official texts on American practice in international law according to the Guide to International Legal Research. It has been more or less superseded by Moore's Digest.
KF 6236 .A5522

Digest of United States Practice in International Law. Arthur W. Rovine ed. Washington, DC: Office of the Legal Adviser, Dept. of State, 1974-1980.
Coverage includes; International Law in General, Subjects of International Law, The Individual in International Law, State Representation, The Law of Treaties and Other International Agreements, State Territory, Jurisdiction, and Jurisdictional Immunities, Law of the Sea and International Waterways, Aviation and Space Law, State Responsibility for Injuries to Aliens, International Economic Law, Environmental and Health Affairs, Scientific, Educational and Cultural Affairs, Peaceful Settlement of Disputes, Legal Regulation of Use of Force, and Private International Law. Each volume is individually indexed with a separate cumulative index volume.

c. Other Sources for U.S. Practice

Restatement of the Law, Third : the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, Rev. and enl., St. Paul, Minn.: American Law Institute Publishers, 1987-.
According to its introduction, the Restatement of the Law, Third : the Foreign Relations Law of the United States, is an attempt to articulate "the rules that an impartial tribunal would apply if charged with deciding a controversy in accordance with international law." Be advised that, while this is not an official statement of U.S. practice in the area of international law, it is considered highly authoritative. The Restatement is divided into nine main parts: I. International Law and Its Relation to United States Law; II. Persons in International Law; III. International Agreements; IV. Jurisdiction and Judgments; V. The Law of the Sea; VI. The Law of the Environment; VII. Protection of Persons (Natural and Juridical); VIII. Selected Law of International Economic Relations; and IX. Remedies for Violations of International Law.

3. Sources of Practice for Other States

Yearbooks on international law are an excellent source of information regarding a state's practice in the field of international law. Often they include cases from national courts interpreting international law, reviews of the international practice of particular states or regions, essays by scholars on topics of contemporary importance, and excerpts from national statutes that touch upon international law issues. Following is a list of the more significant yearbooks held by the Office of the Legal Adviser Law Library:

4. Documents and Resolutions of International Organizations

International organizations play an important role in the development of international law. The resolutions and declarations of competent international organizations often provide a first glimpse of developing international customary law. In addition, international organizations also work to systematize international rules in order to foster international cooperation in specific fields of endeavor. For example, Article 13 of the United Nations Charter provides that the General Assembly is charged with the responsibility of "encouraging the progressive development of international law and its codification." In this effort, the U.N.'s International Law Commission has completed a number of important international conventions codifying customary international law.

III. GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF LAW

The third source of international law as enumerated in Article 38 are "general principles of law" recognized by "civilized" nations. A highly regarded treatise on the subject is Bin Cheng's General Principles of Law : as Applied by International Courts and Tribunals, London : Stevens, 1953. (JX 3225 .C45 1953a)

General principles of law are used primarily as "gap fillers" when treaties or customary international law do not provide a rule of decision. Scholars have suggested that as new treaties and customary law develop to address areas of international concern not previously covered, the significance of general principles will fade as these gaps in international law are filled.

IV. DECISIONS OF INTERNATIONAL JUDICIAL OR ARBITRAL TRIBUNALS

Article 38(1)(d) identifies judicial decisions of state and international courts as a subsidiary means for determining international law. In aggregate, such decisions assist in articulating and solidifying international legal norms.

A. Permanent Court of International Justice (PCIJ)

The Permanent Court of International Justice was established pursuant to Article 14 of the Covenant of the League of Nations. Between 1922 and 1946, when it was replaced by the International Court of Justice, the court issued 27 opinions under its "advisory jurisdiction", and 32 judgments under its "contentious jurisdiction." Following are the various digests and reports held by the Law Library which provide access to this Court's jurisprudence

B. International Court of Justice (ICJ)

The International Court of Justice (ICJ), the main judicial body of the United Nations, was established in 1945 as a product of the drafting of the Charter of the United Nations. The Court's constitutive statute was subsequently annexed to the Charter. All members of the UN are ipso facto parties to the statute of the Court. (Art. 93(1), UN Charter). A state which is not a member of the UN may become a party to the Statute of the ICJ on conditions determined by the General Assembly upon the recommendation of the Security Council. (Art. 93(2), UN Charter).

The Court has both advisory and contentious jurisdiction. Under Article 96 of the UN Charter the "General Assembly or the Security Council may request the International Court of Justice to give an advisory opinion on any legal question." (Art. 96(1), UN Charter) In addition, "other organs of the United Nations and specialized agencies, which may at any time be so authorized by the General Assembly, may also request advisory opinions of the Court on legal questions arising within the scope of their activities." (Art. 96(2), UN Charter).

Under its contentious jurisdiction (cases between states' parties), the Court may hear cases "which the parties refer to it and all matters specially provided for in the Charter of the United Nations or in treaties and conventions in force. " (Art. 36(1) of the Statute of the ICJ). While under Article 59 of the statute of the Court, decisions have no binding force except between the parties, the Court's rulings are authoritative statements of international law and are widely cited both by the Court itself, and by international law scholars.

The Law Library receives the opinions of the ICJ as well as the selected pleadings, oral arguments and other documents issued by the Court during its deliberations. In addition, the library has digests that provide subject access to the decisions of the ICJ. Also, many secondary sources are available that describe in detail the procedures of the Court and critically analyze its jurisprudence.

The ICJ's website <http://www.icj-cij.org/> provides information about pending and past cases before the Court. The site includes docket information, court documents, case summaries, and rules of the court.

Foreign Law: Current Sources of Codes and Basic Legislation in Jurisdictions of the World. Thomas H. Reynolds and Arturo A. Flores. Littleton, CO: Rothman, 1989+.
It is arranged geographically with volume I covering the Western Hemisphere, volume II covering Europe, and volume III covering Africa, Asia, and Australasia.
Countries/jurisdictions are arranged alphabetically within each volume. Each country entry begins with background information, then a list of major publications, major codifications, official gazettes, session laws, court reporters, and Internet resources. This is followed by an arrangement of some 60-subject areas with cross-references.
