University of Virginia Honor System Form

To Prospective Students:

Since 1842, the University of Virginia has benefited from a body of community ethical standards realized in the Honor System. It is based on the presupposition that the absence of lying, cheating, and stealing from the University community promotes an atmosphere of mutual trust conducive to the pursuit of a worthwhile education.

The history of the Honor System reveals that it is not a static or outdated tradition. It has undergone many changes since its foundation in 1842 to meet the needs and standards of each current body. Virginia students have upheld the System because of the type of community it generates and because of the positive effect living in such a community has on each student.

The University community enjoys an agreement among its members that they shall not tolerate lying, cheating, or stealing. Every student is expected by his peers to conduct himself honorably and is expected to leave if he will not do so. Students found guilty of an honor offense are without exception dismissed permanently from the University and, where a University degree has already been conferred, are subject to degree revocation proceedings by the General Faculty. By enrolling in the University, a student joins in that agreement as embodied in the Honor System.

The Honor System has generally been regarded as one of the University's most notable and respected traditions. But this System is more than revered tradition or lofty idea. It is an institution which has constantly been re-examined and re-affirmed, one which brings concrete benefits both to individual students and to the University as a whole. Students at Virginia can be proud to live in an academic environment where one's word is accepted without question by students, faculty and administrators alike; where one can take unproctored tests and leave an examination room for a breath of fresh air without the fear of suspicion; and where local merchants will accept a check upon one's identity as a University student.

The student body has gained many privileges because of the trust placed in University students, and the community has thrived on this trust. It is up to every student to ensure that this trust is not abused. As the Honor System is entirely student administered, this is a responsibility which is not taken lightly.

Students are expected to uphold the community of trust by not lying, cheating or stealing, and are strongly encouraged to either confront a fellow student who has committed an honor offense, or initiate a case with the Honor Committee.

Every person who is considering attending the University should be aware of the Honor System and of the responsibilities its maintenance places on University students. The Honor Committee welcomes inquiries from interested persons concerning any aspect of the System.

The Honor Committee

The University of Virginia Honor System

I, the undersigned, have read the above explanation of the Honor System and I understand that as a student of the University I will be participating in this system. I agree to support and abide by the Honor System, which prohibits lying, cheating, and stealing. I understand and accept that the Honor System is administered entirely by student representatives, including investigations, adjudication, and appeal review, and that violations will result in permanent expulsion and revocation of any University degree.
