FACULTY PROFILE
Who is your favorite psychologist and why?

Dick Repucci: My favorite psychologist is my former colleague Seymour Sarason, Professor of psychology at Yale University for approximately 45 years (1945-1990), because he raised questions for me that I could not answer but which demanded investigation and because he believed in the co-equal values of seeking knowledge for the sake of understanding and using that knowledge for the sake of action. He helped me to view people both in context and as individuals; to recognize the value of multiple perspectives; and to tackle various problems with multiple methods none of which provided a corner on truth. And perhaps most importantly, he really cared about people—family, friends, students, colleagues and others—and never lost sight of their humanity.
