ACADEMIC RESOURCE GUIDE

DECEMBER 2011
This guide was developed as of November 2011, under the direction of Martha Williams, to assist JABA managers and project leaders to identify and contact student volunteers and other academic resources available in the community.

Section I – Inventory of Existing Contacts

Based on a survey of JABA staff this lists academic programs and key contacts both at JABA and the educational institution for current or recent collaborative efforts. There are three sections: UVA, other higher education, and high school.

Section II – UVA Campus-Wide Initiatives
Section III – UVA School-Specific Programs

These sections are based on a search of the UVA Website to identify links to the many programs at UVA which include a goal of community service and/or service learning.

Appendix

Includes a few examples of relevant UVA websites as of November 2011.

   “Madison House serves as the student volunteer center at the University of Virginia"

“an annual event with a twofold mission: to introduce incoming students to service and service learning opportunities at U.Va. and to familiarize participants with some of the local agencies that rely on the continued dedication and commitment of the University community.”

Organized by the Orientation and New Student Programs of the Office of the Dean of Students.

“... promotes basic and applied research on topics related to aging, serves as an information and education resource about aging issues, and seeks to influence the development and implementation of public policy that addresses the needs of older adults.”

Sponsored by Office of Vice President of Research.

Madison House (how a JABA program can become a site)
UVA students run the volunteer program. Each site has a committed Community Partner (CP) who works for the organization and helps train and oversee all the volunteers coming to that site. The CP also works closely with a Program Director (PD), a UVA student in charge of recruiting, training, scheduling and managing the UVA volunteers. It typically takes about a semester to go through the training/paperwork/etc. to become a site. Usually, a new site is started because of a UVA student who already volunteers there and wants to make it a part of Madison House.

Madison House “Cavaliers Care: Day of Service”
One-day event engaging UVA students, alumni, faculty and staff in a 2-3 hour project in Charlottesville, Albemarle and surrounding counties. Day is in April.
