Application Process
Current U.Va. Students

Important academic factors considered by Admissions include cumulative grade point average, academic performance in prerequisites and those courses related to business (accounting, economics, mathematics) and degree of difficulty of courses taken to date as a demonstration of the student's general ability and desire. Also, skills and personal characteristics such as leadership, communication, work experience, and time management will be considered as demonstrated through cocurricular activities and application essays.

McIntire Admission Committee's Review Process

The McIntire Undergraduate Admissions Committee is comprised of four faculty members. Each faculty member separately reviews and makes independent decisions on each applicant. Following the independent reviews, the group meets to reach consensus on each applicant.

Some of the evaluative criteria used in the review process are listed below.

Grades

- Load per semester
- Difficulty of courses
- Trend in performance
- Grades in prerequisites (accounting, economics, math)

Extracurricular Activities

- Activities and leadership within organizations
- Work experiences
