Undergraduate Alumni Survey 1997

The University of Virginia's Office of Institutional Assessment and Studies conducted a survey of 1,188 alumni of the class of 1992 during the summer of 1997 to assess the impact of undergraduate education on students' lives five years after graduation. One of the more specific objectives of the survey was to learn about the careers UVa graduates choose, including how they obtained those careers and how well their undergraduate experience served them in their career goals.

Methodology

The findings presented on this page are from the Undergraduate Experience and Beyond, a survey of 1,188 alumni of the class of 1992 conducted by the University of Virginia's Office of Institutional Assessment and Studies. The survey was conducted by mail between June 1 and September 15, 1997. The survey results have a margin of error of ± 2.6% for questions that were answered by every respondent. The margin of error is higher for questions that were answered by fewer respondents or results that have been presented by school. The data were adjusted to reflect the proper proportion of alumni from each academic area.
