Teaching philosophy

I love teaching my students, following the five Cs for language teaching but cater to the differentiated need, to obtain the functional language development in real-life contexts, while having fun by including rich authentic Chinese culture. I always set up native Chinese language partners for my students, so they will help one another's Chinese and English, and exchange their knowledge of both cultures, and help them to be immersed in the target language while still physically in the US, that is also a way to facilitate the acquisition of life-long learning skills, prepare students to function effectively in an information economy.
