I am passionate about education, because I am a constant learner myself. I first learned how to teach in my college, where I majored in Chinese Language and Literature with an emphasis in education. However, I believe that teaching is also a learning experience. I have learned many valuable things from my students and other teachers. I chose the teaching profession, because I have an abiding interest in helping young people experience success in school.

I believe that a key element in teaching Chinese is to keep student interested and motivated. My objective as a teacher is to motivate my students toward a level of independence where they develop a desire to learn and think for themselves. I also believe that it is important for teachers to facilitate learning rather than to dominate learning, so that students will gradually become life-long, independent, and resourceful learners.

Best teacher’s commitment is to inspire excellence in its students, and encourage the student to develop their communication skills for a balanced life.
