

University of Virginia Department of Student Health Gynecology Clinic: Fall 2009

Charges for chlamydia and gonorrhea tests and routine “annual” Paps only[#]:

If you pay at the time of your visit:	If you have the charge billed to your insurance plan:	Comment:
Wholesale charge for chlamydia (“C”) test = $23 Wholesale charge for gonorrhea (“GC”) test = $23 Wholesale charge for Pap = $33	Regular charge* for chlamydia test = $138⁺ Regular charge* for gonorrhea test = $138⁺ Regular charge* for Pap = $118⁺	*If your insurance does not cover those tests, or if you have a deductible or co-pay, you will be responsible for the entire amount of the regular charge.
If the Pap result is “atypical”, the lab automatically does an HPV test:
Wholesale charge for HPV test= $159	Regular charge for HPV test ~ $200⁺	Ditto
If the Pap result is any other abnormality, there is an extra charge of ~ $50 for non-wholesale accounts:
No additional charge	Additional charge~ $50⁺	Ditto
Least expensive scenario (normal Pap):
Total= $33 plus $46 for C and GC if done; partially or totally reimbursed by insurance when you submit a claim if the Pap, C and GC are covered by your insurance company when performed at UVa Hospital.	Total= $118⁺ plus $276⁺ for C and GC if done*. 	*If your insurance does not cover those tests, or if you have a deductible or co-pay, you will be responsible for non-covered amount of the regular charge.
Most expensive scenario (atypical Pap plus HPV test OR other abnormal Pap):
Total= $192 for Pap and HPV test plus $46 for C and GC if done.	Total= $322⁺ plus $276⁺ for C and GC if done*. 	*If your insurance does not cover those tests, or if you have a deductible or co-pay, you will be responsible for the non-covered amount of the regular charge.

Other Pap tests (i.e. follow-up after abnormal) are more expensive because they undergo additional expert review by a pathologist. Those Paps MUST be charged to insurance or billed to you by the hospital.

+ Prices are set by UVa Hospital and are subject to change without notice.